

New housing springs up in CDLO's Spring Valley.

Seattle may have the Space Needle, but we have a brand new duplex high-rise for bats. Tim Dooley Jr., an aspiring Eagle Scout from Troop 373, produced this bat housing project and assembled a team to set it up near the ponds in Spring Valley. Team member Sabina Hathaway took this picture of the rest of the team hard at work. From left to right and back around: Ben Crick, Henry Coletto, Tim Dooley Sr., Bob Clement, Tim Dooley Jr. and William Crick (also from Troop 373). Count Dracula would be proud!

The two young men from Troop 373 work on the finishing touches prior to putting up the vacancy sign. Hello bats - goodbye mosquitoes.
